WE AVERTED DISASTER; BUT HOW SOON UNTIL WE DON'T?

5-Alarm Fire

Many an eyebrow was raised when the commissioner took on a Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion initiative to expand the tour. This was laid out with the best of intentions, but like many well intended ideas, this almost divided the tour across party boundaries.

The idea was fair enough. At the core of this league is good dudes, helping good dudes meet more good dudes. Vibes are always a priority and stakes often take a back seat. And the commish thought he took the necessary steps of building a sturdy border between the new fellas and the chance to win a prize. But a dark cloud was circling over the final group's head as the scoreboard began to assemble...

2 new players were at the top of the leaderboard heading down the final stretch, Kenny Weatherman and Kevin Proehl, and I could already hear the belly aching beginning to grow (JUSTIN) about defending against such an outcome. "They haven't paid their dues into the system, and they think they can just stroll right through the chain link fence (at Clearwater Country Club) and take OUR tournament?'. It was beginning to weigh on the commish, and they had a point.

I had thought I took the necessary precautions. I vetted them. They all passed a preliminary background check.

The minimum 15 point quota was a fair cost to entry for the low amateurs. But it still looked inevitable... I was going to have to wear this one.

But like many of the problems facing this country, turns out we just needed another straight white man to solve it. Alex Grandjacquet put up a dazzling performance down the stretch, undaunted by the caravan of newbies trying to force their way into a title. His illustrious performance down the stretch will certainly go down in the annals of tour history. So next time you see a straight white man, tell him "hey, thank you". You never know when you'll need one.

AN INTIMATE INTERVIEW

by Your Commish

Commish: Bonesaw

Bonesaw: Commish

Commish: Let's get right into to it, what happened?

Bonesaw: First, thanks for having me on to talk, it's always a pleasure to be featured, and I appreciate you giving me a couple days to let the scabs heal. But pretty simply, I just didn't have it. On hole number 1 I lipped out for less than 2 feet and from there it just kept going.

Commish: How was your game as a whole though?

Bonesaw: In a word; schizophrenic. I'd hit a couple great drives down the middle, then banana peel it onto the street. I'd leave a putt 4 feet short, then roll it 8 feet past. I don't know if I've ever hit so many weak iron shots in my life, and I was chipping fine but couldn't convert anything. I wasn't making any putts.

Commish: Do you think the conditions are to blame?

Bonesaw: To a large extent, yes. I do. It's difficult for me to imagine putting up such a paltry performance on a day where I have consistently good lies, but I have to wear some of this just on poor mental play throughout the round.

Commish: What percentage would you say is your fault?

Bonesaw: Somewhere between 5-10%

Commish: Fair enough. You got to witness history with AG putting up more quota points than ever witnessed on tour today. Was that some consolation?

Bonesaw: Not in the slightest. That's cool, I'm happy for him, truly couldn't happen to a better guy, but at the end of the day we're all competitors out there and I want to win and I just knew by hole 5 I didn't have it today.

Commish: That's completely fair. What are your preparations for J6 looking like?

Bonesaw: Yahweh made the comment early on that I'm looking relatively fit and I think fitness is a big part of my success on tour. When I'm playing well I'm usually eating right, exercising. Big for me is the last meal the night prior to playing, because it's never the booze that gets me, it's the food the next morning, and I had a very important party on Friday that didn't induce me to stay strict on the diet. Going to plan my meals a little better in the days and weeks heading to the next event.

Commish: Thank you for taking the time today to be so raw and honest, I know it's tough, but I think this will be good for the public.

Bonesaw: Pleasure is all mine, thank you.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

Lightning Strikes Twice, As Previous Major Winner AG Nabs Another

The French haven't been known for their indomitable spirit since the days of Napoleon, but the red headed beauty named Alex Grandjacquet is doing Yeoman's work to right that ship. Alex came out and became the first to join Room 40(eez nuts) with 40 whole quota points in an event. The only blemishes came when AG was standing over a 5 footer to save bogey when the commish strategically muttered "guy doesn't miss" prompting a rare "shut the fuck up" from the notoriously cool headed lad. However I think in hindsight he would thank the commish for this fuel to his fire; who knows what happens if he doesn't?

Around hole 12 is when the picture started to come into focus and AG saw his opportunity to leapfrog the field. He saw back to back gettable Par 5's and pounced like flanking cavalry division at Austerlitz (Napoleon reference). He went BIRDIE BIRDIE to get the lead from which he would never relinquish. He was playing with house money on 18 and decided to go for the green and ended up in the ravine with a disastrous lie. However he still managed to go up and 2 putt for an exclamation point to end his day and punch his admission to Room 40(eez nuts).

Kenneth Weatherman

This man came prepared with stakes on the line and worked up a lather in pants a solid 2 hours before his tee time. He's a great vibes guy and was awesome at the after party. We'll see you J6

Kevin Proehl

Kevin does something with numbers at HSBC (communist?) and enjoys the finer things in life, like showing off the sick new turf in his backyard. Will this help improve his short game? We'll find out J6

---

Tyler Selesky

When he's not dropping bombs in Fort Myers he's draining putts in Clearwater. A cool and steady golfer through and through, if Lake Jovita allows us the allotted tee times he is a darkhorse to win it all. If you haven't heard, that's his home course.

---

Zach Daniels

One thing I take pride in is having out Net Contributors. Logistics guys. The kind of people who make the world go round. Zach demonstrated he is this in spades when not only did he provide the commish with Orange NUTRLs in our Friday practice round, but he also supplied pizza for the after. That is enough to punch a ticket in my book. See you J6

Jared Glyn

A wonderful addition to the tour, Jared takes old man golf to new heights. Nary a fairway is missed, a chip duffed, nor a makable putt missed. A true Northeastern gem, he punched his ticket with a 76 in his first event.

J6 And Things to Come

The final major of the tour season is upon us, let us take a moment to reflect on where this began, and where we are going.

This entire tour started because of a boys golf trip to North Carolina, where the commish took the initiative to engage in negotiations with the Crist Family Foundation to secure lodging at an unbeatable price. Once the lodging was secured there were still naysayers, haters, and negative Nancy's suggesting that this trip will never make it out of the group chat. But a determined commish was not going to let that be the case. Between scheduling tee times months in advance at uber premium courses, linking up pairings to drive up, and more, the trip was set and many funs were had. Initially I was concerned many players would be worn out from the festivities, but much to my delight, the question on everyone's mind was. "What's next?".

Then we had a spectacular event at The Bonesaw Open, followed by the Ponte Vedra Classic, and finally our first non major event, the Clearwater Qualifier. It wouldn't be a tour season and now we look forward to the next event, the January 6th Mostly Peaceful Self Guided Tour of the Capitol Rotunda Ashley Babbit Memorial Tournament. The event will be a 1-day, 36 hole quota event in the same style as The Clearwater Qualifier. Thus far 20 tickets have been punched and of the courses will allow for it we will expand the field to potentially 28 competitors.

THE GREAT COMPROMISE OF 2023

Much hooplah and hoorah has been made about the J6 tournament (may God rest her soul) as deservedly so. I mean, after so many successful events, it only makes sense that the buzz surrounding the seasons final major take center stage. But on this rare occasion, the Commish may not have had the foresight needed to come through on his promises.

Initially, the goal was to have 36 holes at Lake Jovita, since it sports 36 championship holes and would be a perfect host for such an event. However, the same tactic that vaulted Napoleon to success in conquering the European continent, was also the same pitfall for this perfectly devised plan; logistics.

Unfortunately in my communications with Lake Jovita they informed me that the best they could do was an 18 hole shotgun start at 10:20, followed by a 3PM 9-hole finisher to complete the Major event. I was skeptical, after all, if we're going to crown a Major champion, he should have to earn it, right? But I proceeded with cautious skepticism that we could make this work. But then the LJ gave me some unfortunate news, "that comes out to be $180 and change to each player".

I was aghast. Taken aback. Thrown off kilter, even. Such a price tag for 27 holes seemed astronomical for a tour that prides itself on accessibility, diversity, and inclusion. Something had to change.

I immediately began phoning in my contacts at courses, Wentworth, Crescent Oaks, Cypress Run, the entire gauntlet. When lo and behold, the GM at Plantation Palms stepped up with an offer I couldn't refuse, and thus the new host was decided.

On J6 we will be playing Plantation Palms for 36 holes starting at 7 AM (Opie will be in final group don't worry), for a tidy sum of only $80/player INCLUDING range balls. After some backroom deals and negotiations, I was able to secure the best package possible for my players, whomst my representation responsibilities I do not take lightly.

That said, the compromise has been struck amongst the bourgeois of the tour to make a return to LJ, but this time in the summer for the Bonesaw Open, which sports a 36 hole day followed by an 18 hole championship final round. Rest assured, this was the best possible outcome the Commish could have secured, and he continues to work round the clock on your behalf.
